About the Minato City Flood Hazard Map

This map shows a forecast of the areas that will be flooded in the event of heavy rain that greatly exceeds the drainage capacity of the sewerage system and rivers. The map shows information such as the areas that are expected to be flooded, and the flood depths and evacuation centers for those areas.

We ask city residents to be aware of the possibility of flooding, and use this map in their everyday preparedness for flooding and evacuation. Check the flood situation for the area around your home.

Types of Inundation

Inundation by River Water (Flood)
Inundation by river water is a phenomenon where the river water overflows and causes inundation in the city.

Inland Inundation (Inland Flood)
Inland inundation is a phenomenon whereby the capacity of sewerage and drainage is exceeded, which causes overflow of rainwater and inundation of the city.

Assumed Zone of Inundation

The assumed zones of inundation on this map show the scope and the height of the inundation when the heaviest possible rainfall (total rainfall: 690mm, maximum rainfall in 1 hour: 153mm) occurs in the respective basins. Regarding the inundation estimates, the content of "Expected Inundation Area Map" that considers both inundation by river water and inland inundation and is published by the Tokyo Metropolitan Government is reflected in the map.

Expected inundation in each river basin prepared by the Tokyo Metropolitan Government can be checked below.
