

Minato City Liquefaction Map

October-2013

① Forecasted Earthquake
[Earthquake in the Northern part of Tokyo Bay]
[Tokyo Inland Earthquake]
In the liquefaction stratum
Acceleration rate approximately 500 to over 600 gal

Concerning the Liquefaction Map

The liquefaction map was created assessing the potential for liquefaction, taking into consideration the characteristics of the topography and ground of the respective areas. Intensity of shaking, indicated on the seismic vulnerability map, was also taken into consideration at the time.

The degree of risk for liquefaction indicated on this map is an estimated value based on ground information obtained thus far, and does not indicate the degree of damage caused by liquefaction.

Additionally, it does not reflect measures taken against liquefaction, such as ground improvements already in progress.

Legend

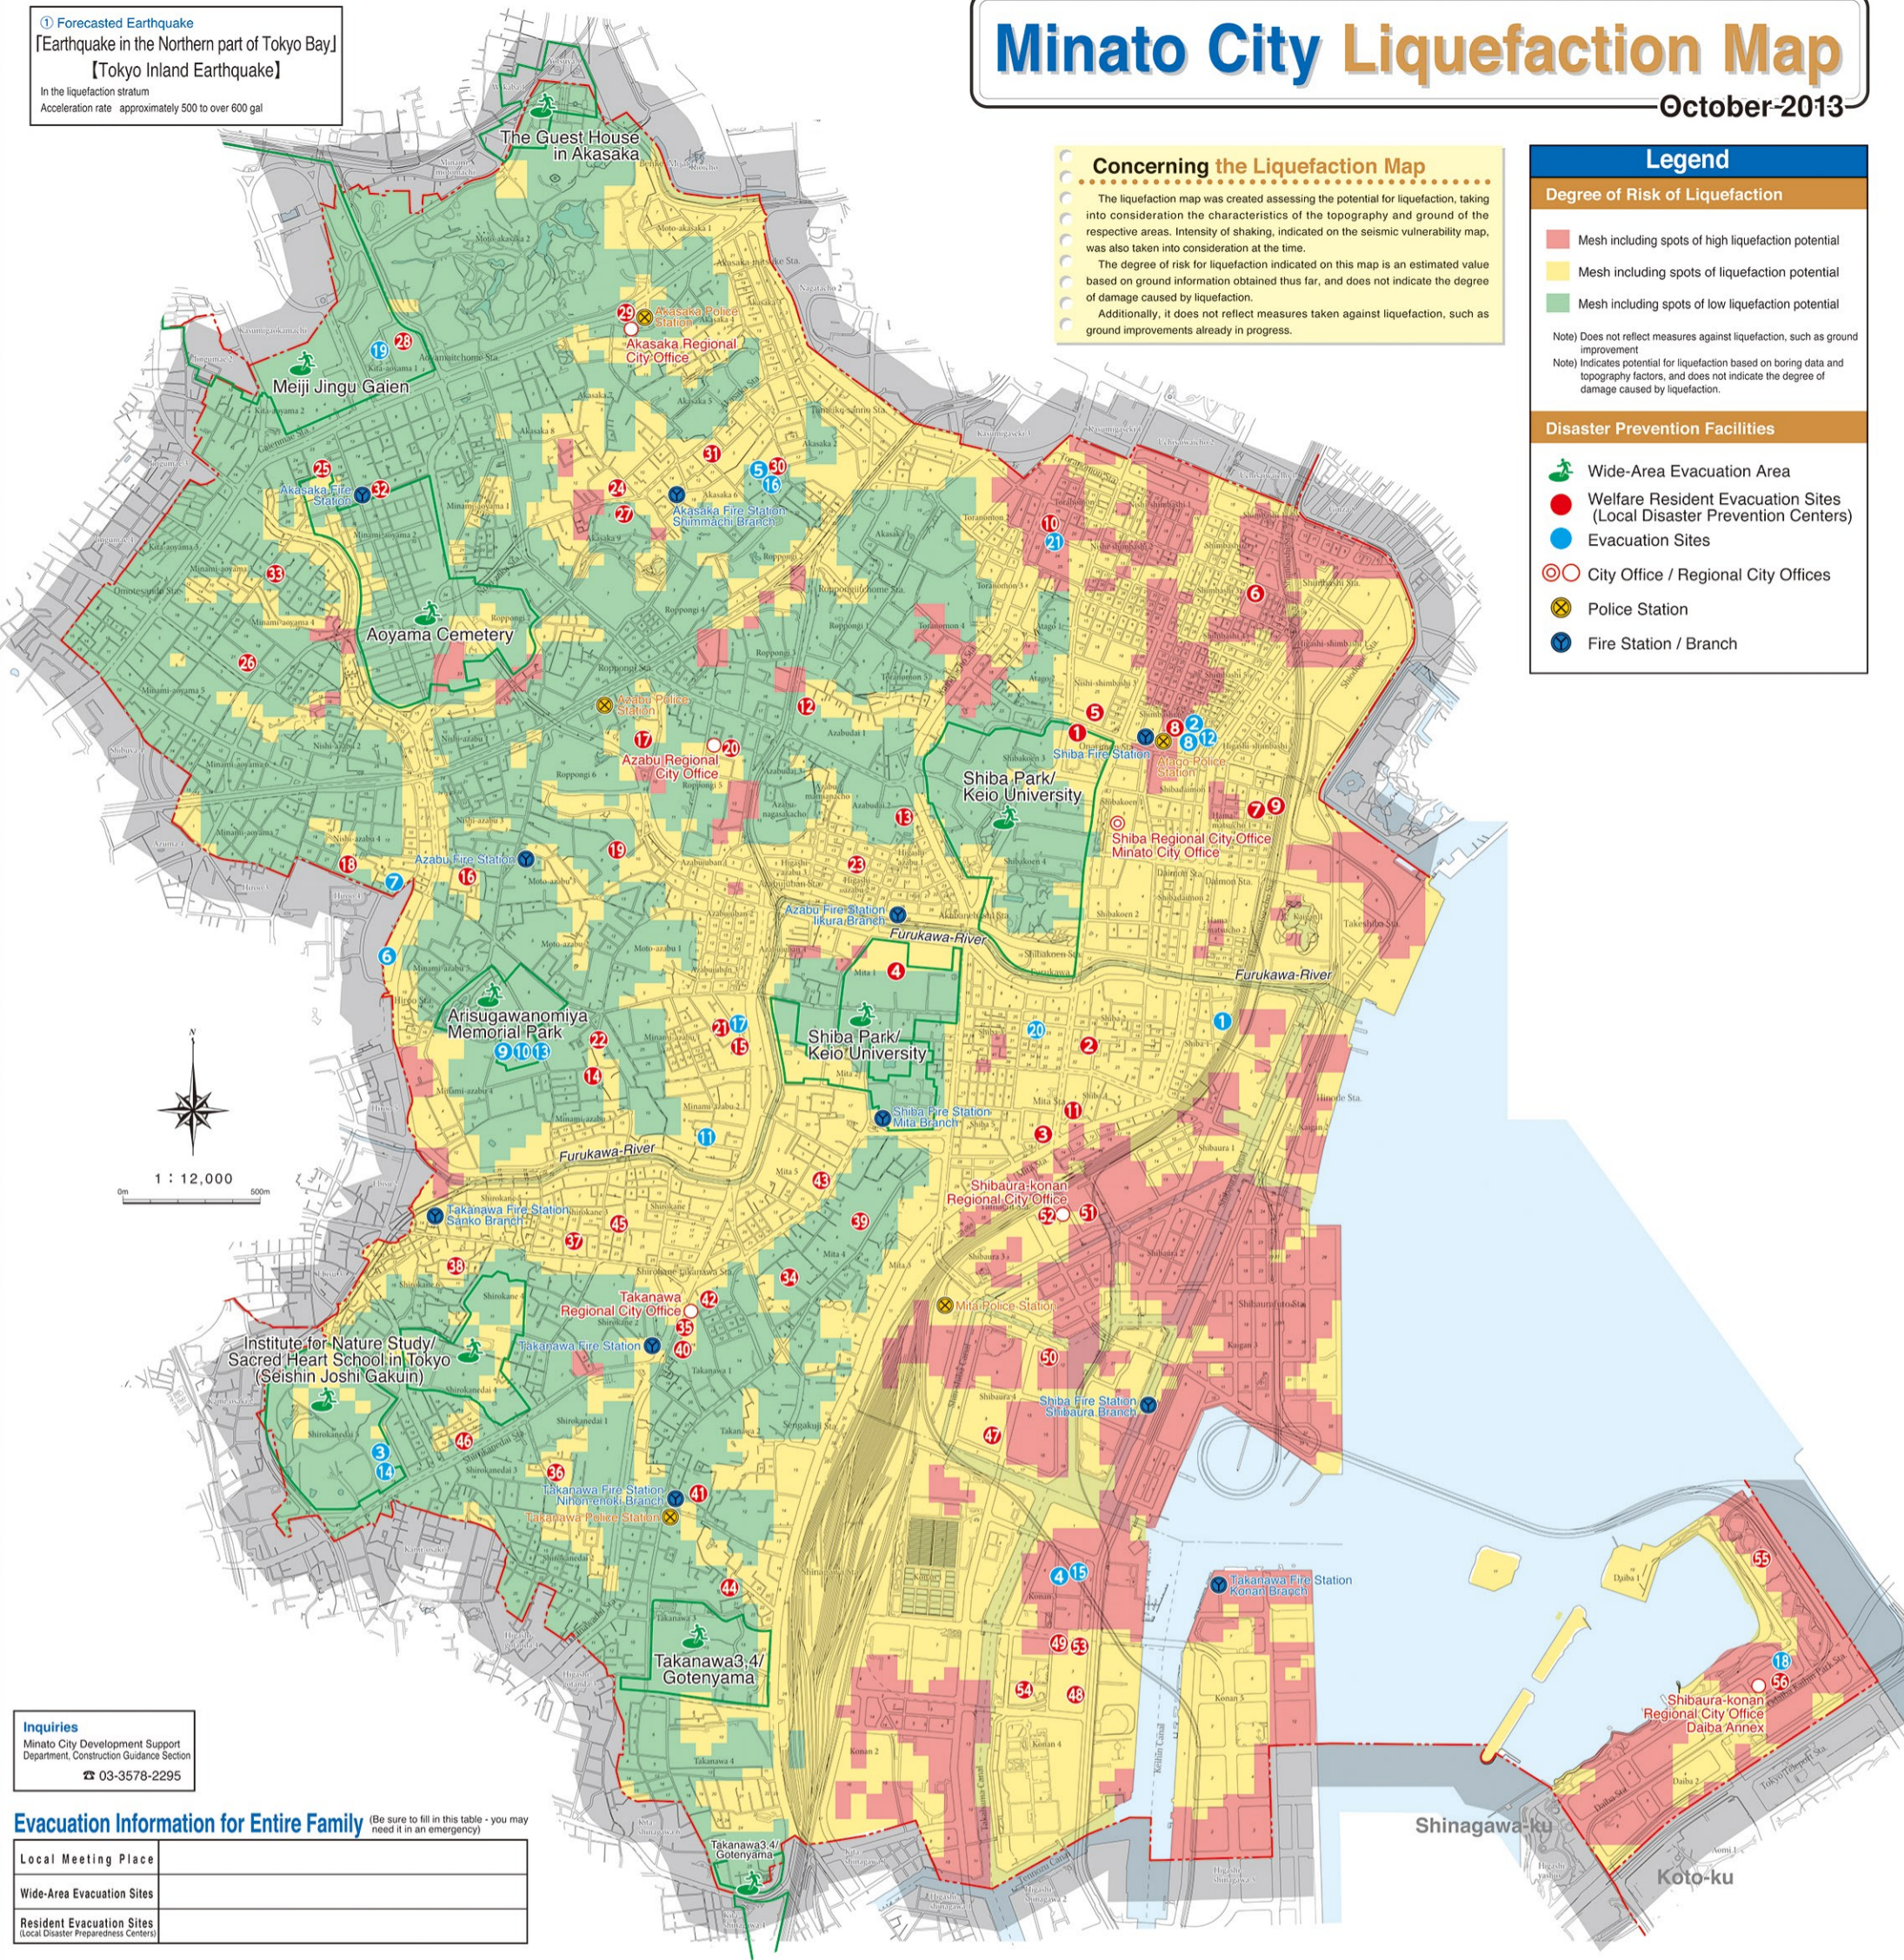

Degree of Risk of Liquefaction

- Mesh including spots of high liquefaction potential
- Mesh including spots of liquefaction potential
- Mesh including spots of low liquefaction potential

Note) Does not reflect measures against liquefaction, such as ground improvement
Note) Indicates potential for liquefaction based on boring data and topography factors, and does not indicate the degree of damage caused by liquefaction.
